IRVINE, Calif., March 20, 2019—CoreLogic® (NYSE: CLGX), a leading global property information, analytics and data-enabled solutions provider, today announced that it has entered into an agreement with Homesnap, provider of the top-rated agent mobile productivity platform, to offer their mutual CoreLogic and Homesnap customers advanced integrations. These integrations between Matrix™, CoreLogic’s multiple listing software system, and Homesnap Pro will include full synchronization of contacts, prospects, saved searches and favorites between the two platforms, edit listing functionality, and ultimately, the ability to add a new listing.

“Agents want to be able to perform their essential business functions in one place, using one platform. “Our clients have asked for integrated solutions that make the products they use more powerful and efficient. We are always trying to make Homesnap Pro an even better tool for agents, brokers and multiple listing organizations, and this relationship with CoreLogic was a natural step for us,” said Homesnap CEO John Mazur. “CoreLogic provides one of the top software solutions for multiple listing organizations, and the integrations that we’re developing together will be incredibly valuable for our mutual customers.”

Homesnap and CoreLogic expect the first phase of these integrations to be introduced before the end of the second quarter of 2019.

“The demand for Homesnap Pro was evident when it became one of our most rapidly adopted services ever. The upcoming integration with Matrix will ensure continued strong usage going forward,” said Northwest Multiple Listing Service President and CEO Tom Hurdelbrink.

Homesnap Pro is the most popular agent productivity app on the market, currently available to roughly 1 million agents in more than 170 multiple listing organizations across the country.
